

Pollock Youngpole

Family Passed

I've had this old window frame I wanted to use as a backdrop for some pictures. But I struggled to find something I thought would be interesting. I finally decided on old photographs using negatives instead of prints to symbolize the souls of family members that have passed. I created a mounting that allows the piece to sit about two inches from the wall so light can pass through. It helps that unknown photographers took some great pictures, I would like to think they were all related. I included photos of the actual piece and the concept created in Photoshop. Taking a picture of the actual piece was very difficult because the glass reflected the background I hope this will be taken into account. I included the concept photo to allow the juror to see how the piece might look without the reflection.